Food

There are plenty of food options within a short walk of the hotel and venue. Many of the options below are less than a 15 minute jaunt from either location. There are a few places that are further than that, still in Vancouver, but are mentioned because they're worth checking out.

STORM CROW
TAVERN

One such place is the Storm Crow Tavern (<http://www.stormcrowtavern.com/>) which is a 10 minute taxi ride from downtown. The owner, Jason Kapalka, has kindly offered a 10% "Magic" discount for days before, during and after the Grand Prix to judges that present their judge name tag.

Vancouver has a high cost of living and a mild climate for Canada. Correspondingly, there is a high number of homeless and transients looking for a handout on the streets. Vancouver residents tend to avoid social contact on the street and appear unapproachable because of these constant requests. Tourists needing directions shouldn't be dissuaded from approaching residents for directions, Vancouverites are friendly once you get past the initial reticence.
